BUNDLE UP!

As the cold weather sets in, it's important to ensure babies and young children are dressed appropriately. Babies especially, as they cannot always communicate that they are feeling too cold or too hot.

Children and babies' little bodies lose heat faster than our adult bodies. When bundling your child to go outside and play, consider adding one additional layer than you would wear for the temperature outside. Dress in layers and check the back of the neck, fingers, and toes regularly to check on your child's temperature. If they feel too warm, remove a layer. If they feel cold, add a layer or go inside.

It is important to remember however, not to wear these bulky layers when in a car seat. Any additional bulk in the car seat like a coat, blanket, or "bundle bag" have not been crash tested. This may limit the car seat's functions in the event of a collision which can have life-threatening consequences. Consider dressing your child in a light sweater and placing a blanket over top of their buckled seat belt straps. For more information on this, please visit:

BEAT THE WINTER BLUES

Winter is the time of year where many people notice a shift in their mood. We call these the “winter blues.” To beat the winter blues, it is suggested that you spend more time outdoors during the day or let the natural sunlight into your home as much as you can.

Taking care of your physical health with regular exercise can help you feel less stressed. Go for walks, get some sunlight and practice self-care. To take care of others, it is essential to take care of yourself! Sometimes these methods aren't quite enough to get our spirits back up. Seeing your doctor or a mental health professional is recommended in those instances.

PLAY SAFE THIS WINTER!

Winter can bring so many unique opportunities for play! For activities like skating, skiing, snowboarding, tubing, and tobogganing, it is recommended that children (and adults) wear a helmet to prevent head injuries.

Supervise children closely during outdoor activities. The winter brings opportunities for risky play, like climbing snow piles, but also brings hazards like falling through ice. It is our responsibility to provide children room to explore and take risks while protecting them from hazards. Talk with your child about what winter hazards look like and how they can stay safe. Let's have a safe and happy winter!

MAKE A SNOW-TATO HEAD

Give Potato Head a whole new look by taking it outdoors!

While building a snowman is always a hit, why not let your littles try their hand at making a Potato Snow Head! It's a super simple and fun way to play with toys in a whole new way. All you need is SNOW and a tray of your favourite Potato Head accessories and let the fun begin.

If they are able, encourage your little ones to crunch together some snow to build a snow ball, building on their bilateral coordination. (Bilateral coordination: Coordinating the use of two hands to accomplish a task, such as stabilizing an object with one hand while working with the other)

This a great opportunity for language development as you use words like 'Bigger', 'smaller' and 'round'.

When a desirable size is reached, encourage them to use their creativity to add potato head accessories by adding arms, feet, eyes, nose, mouth and hat.

Too cold to go outside? This activity can easily be done indoors too by giving them some mitts and bringing a large bin of snow inside.
